The Department

The Department of Architecture which was founded in 1910 and has an international reputation for teaching and research. It is in an exciting period of expansion, having recently received funding from the University to double in size. It has added a new MSt Apprenticeship and is in the process of creating a pioneering Master of Design tripos: a four-year undergraduate degree which will combine architecture, materials science and engineering. The Professor will be joining its academic team and expected to provide academic and research leadership to help achieve its strategic goal to cement its place as one of the World’s leading architecture schools.

The Faculty

The Department is part of the Faculty of Architecture and History of Art. The Faculty has been housed since the 1920s in 1-5 Scroope Terrace. The Architecture Department now has additional studio space in Mill Lane and a new Digital Fabrication Laboratory in the Dyson Building in Engineering, with further plans for expansion in the coming years. Scroope Terrace houses the seminar rooms, offices and 35,000 volume Faculty Library and is conveniently located near to the Fitzwilliam Museum and an easy walk from the railway station and the centre of town.
The Department
The Department currently has 1 established Chair, 14 established academic staff (planned to increase to 25 over the next 4 years), 4 funded distinguished Visiting Professors, and 24 Design Fellows (part-time studio teachers), and around 20 research staff. The student population is currently made up of around 175 undergraduate students which is due to rise to 430 in the next 5 years with the formation of the new MDes degree and 160 postgraduates. The undergraduate course has the highest application to place ratio in the University and on this basis is being allowed to expand both in numbers and facilities. It has a good record in widening participation and seeks to actively engage with outreach to maintain this.

The Department offers a range of courses designed to cater for students who wish to practice and research in the field:-

Taught courses
- Undergraduate BA(Hons) ARB/RIBA Part 1
- 2-year full time MArch ARB/RIBA Part 2
- 3-4 year part-time MSt Apprenticeship ARB Part 2 and Part 3
- Certificate in Professional Practice ARB/RIBA Part 3

Research Degrees
- 1 year full time MPhil. in Architecture (thesis based research degree)
- 1 year full time MPhil. in Architecture and Urban Studies (taught and research)
- 2 year part-time MSt in Building History

- 3 year PhD
Forthcoming:
- 2 year part-time MSt Screen Media and Architectural Visualisation (starts 2023)
- 4 year integrated undergraduate Master of Design Degree (to seek accreditation in Material Science, Architecture and Structural Engineering- starts 2024).

The Department is looking at creating a foundation course and exploring the possibility of a number of further Masters Degrees. It is seeking an inspiring professor who can help lead such initiatives and who has an established reputation as an outstanding educator in studio teaching and lecturing.

Research
The Department has a world-leading reputation in architectural research, with a long history of sizeable funded research projects covering a wide range of fields including architectural history, sustainability, innovative materials, disaster recovery, urban modelling and health and well-being.

Research is a key part of the role of the new professor. They will be expected to actively contribute to the research environment by setting research agendas, leading research projects and applying for and getting sizeable research grants. They will be expected to already have established reputation in their field and to continue to produce peer-reviewed research and monographs.
Future Vision for the Department

Having remained relatively static in size for much of the last century, the Department has permission to expand in graduate and undergraduate numbers, the expansion in income justifying an expansion in facilities and staff. This involves hiring 9 new lecturers over the next five years and the creation of new spaces for teaching and research. At the heart of this is the design and creation of an entirely new Undergraduate Degree, the Design Tripos, which will sit alongside the Architecture Degree and share many of the same modules but will be a year longer and will offer both Part 1 ARB/RIBA validation and engineering and materials science accreditation. It will teach engineering through a combination of lectures and studio design. It is anticipated that there will be 45 architecture and 45 design students a year.

In line with the University’s policy that students should not be required to supply anything for courses not included in the fees, the Department is now the first architecture school to supply materials in studio and has developed a way of managing the supply of materials accordingly. This is part of a larger agenda in the department to widen participation.

In research, the Faculty is seeking build on its strengths and to attract new areas of innovation. In particular, it is seeking to create a vibrant research environment that encourages cross-fertilisation of ideas and helps researchers apply for grants. In the 1970s the Department had a separate research building called the Martin Centre. In the 2000s research was brought back into the main building where it could more closely inform teaching. In the coming years it is hoped to create a new research space which will foster similar collaborations in the Dyson building.

Through new research, better facilities and a larger staff, the Department is seeking to firmly establish itself as UK’s top architecture department.
The School of Arts and Humanities

In terms of administration, the Faculty of Architecture and History of Art sits within the School of Arts and Humanities.

The University of Cambridge is one of the world’s oldest and most successful universities. We are a renowned centre for research, education, and scholarship that makes a significant contribution to society. The University is consistently ranked amongst the top universities in the world. Our affiliates have won more Nobel Prizes than any other University.

Our sustained pursuit of academic excellence is built on a long history of first-class teaching and research within a distinctive collegiate system. For eight centuries our ideas and innovations have shaped the world. Our principal goal is to remain one of the world’s leading universities in an increasingly competitive global higher education sector. Today the University of Cambridge is at the centre of a cluster of over 4,300 businesses employing 58,000 people.

Our capital investment projects include the West Cambridge site, the North West Cambridge development and the growth of the Biomedical Campus in the south of the city. The North West Cambridge development includes the opening of a primary school – the first in the UK to be managed by a University. So we are deeply embedded in, and committed to serving, our local community. These are all conspicuous signs of a University that is not only adapting to new needs, but also anticipating the future.

Our mission is to contribute to society through the pursuit of education, learning, and research at the highest international levels of excellence. Our core values are:

- freedom of thought and expression; and
- freedom from discrimination.
About Us

The University is one of the world’s leading academic centres. It comprises 150 faculties and departments, together with a central administration and other institutions. Our institutions, museums and collections are a world-class resource for researchers, students and members of the public representing one of the country’s highest concentrations of internationally important collections.

The University has an annual income of £2 billion. Research income, won competitively from the UK Research Councils, the European Union (EU), major charities and industry, exceeds £500 million per annum and continues to grow.

The Colleges and the University remain committed to admitting the best students regardless of their background and to investing considerable resources both in widening access and financial support. The 31 Colleges are self-governing, separate legal entities which appoint their own staff. Many academic staff are invited to join a College as a Teaching Fellow, which provides a further social and intellectual dimension. The Colleges admit students, provide student accommodation and deliver small group teaching.

The University awards degrees and its faculties and departments provide lectures and seminars for students and determine the syllabi for teaching and conducting research.

Our instinct for seeking out excellence and setting up enduring and mutually beneficial collaborations has led us to establish strategic partnerships across the globe. Whether it is the successful Cambridge-Africa Programme involving universities in Ghana, Uganda and elsewhere on the African continent; or the close association with the government of India to pursue new research in crop science; or the creation, with Germany’s Max Planck Institutes, of a Cambridge-based centre for the study of ethics, human economy and social change – international partnerships are now an inextricable part of the University’s make-up.

“Cambridge graduates and researchers have made – and continue to make – a colossal contribution to human knowledge and the understanding of the world around us. Their work touches on the lives and livelihoods of everyone from patients diagnosed with life-threatening diseases, to residents of areas critically affected by climate change, to children growing up in conflict zones. It has a lasting impact on our society, our economy and our culture: the world is truly a better place thanks to their efforts.”

Stephen Toope, Vice Chancellor 2019

Your wellbeing
The University’s Sport Centre, Counselling Services and Occupational Health are just some of the support services available to University employees to promote their physical and mental wellbeing. The University also hosts the Cambridge Science Festival and Cambridge Festival of Ideas, as well as Open Cambridge weekend, which together attract over 50,000 visitors per year. The festivals are a great opportunity to get your first taste of public engagement, through volunteering, supporting hands-on activities or proposing a talk.

Development opportunities
We support new employees to settle in through various activities. The encouragement of career development for all staff is one of the University's values and we put this into practice through various services and initiatives. Our Personal and Professional Development Department provides development opportunities and courses for all University employees. These include face-to-face sessions, online learning modules and webinars. Employees may also apply for financial support to undertake training that will lead to a qualification. We offer reduced staff fees for University of Cambridge graduate courses and the opportunity to attend lectures and seminars held by University departments and institutions. The CareerStart@Cam programme also supports employees in assistant staff roles who do not hold higher education qualifications to develop their skills, experience and qualifications.
College Membership

The University, the Faculties and Departments, and the Colleges are linked in a complicated historical relationship that is mutually beneficial but not simple. Students (both graduate and undergraduate) are admitted by one of the 31 Colleges, although in the case of graduate students the Faculties and Departments determine admissions before the Colleges are involved. Almost all undergraduates, and many graduate students, live in a College.

The teaching of undergraduate students is shared between the Colleges and the Faculties and Departments, with the Colleges arranging small group teaching ("supervision") and the Departments providing lecturing, laboratory classes, and advanced supervisions. Most academic staff will also be invited to join a College as a teaching or professorial fellow.

Membership of a College adds an important social and intellectual dimension which many of the University's academic community find attractive. Most colleges expect their fellows to take part in undergraduate supervision and College administration. Appointment to a College fellowship is a separate matter from a University appointment, for which the College provides modest remuneration additional to University salary. It is not compulsory for academic staff to be a member of a College.

Further advice can be obtained from The Chair of the Faculty/Head of Department or senior colleagues.

The Scheme for newly-appointed University Officers seeking a College Fellowship is set out at: https://www.ois.cam.ac.uk/utoscheme/guidance-for-applicants/view
