William Edwin Jackson's Cash Book: Part 2, 1848-1849

PATRICIA SPENCER-SILVER

Introduction

The first part of William Jackson's cash book, from May 1845 to the end of 1847, was published in Vol.13 of Construction History. This described how William had travelled to London from his home in York, to be apprenticed to his uncle, George Myers, of Ordnance Wharf, Lambeth. It recorded the sites William visited, how he spent his wages and how he occupied his leisure hours, as well as recording the mundane happenings of his life.

By the beginning of 1848, William had become quite a young man about Town. He had always been fond of new clothes and the theatre and now he discovered the pleasures of smoking cigars and gambling, which entailed an occasional visit to the pawn shop. But William was an intelligent young man: he read serious books and many of the journals relevant to his trade and he kept his accounts diligently.

He returned to York on 16 November 1849, his twentieth birthday, and set up in business as a stone mason and sculptor in a workshop at the back of his father's house in Coney Street, York. Before many years had passed, he had moved to Newcastle upon Tyne, where he became one of the leading contractors in the North of England. At Elswick (Newcastle) and also at Cragside, he worked extensively for Lord Armstrong, inventor, pioneer of hydroelectric machinery and armaments manufacturer.

In the early 1870s he launched his youngest brother, John, on his spectacular career of world-wide dock, dam and harbour building.

William Jackson died aged 52 on 16 July 1882, at his home in Newcastle.

1848

- William spent over five weeks at Buckland, Berkshire. The Catholic Church of St George had been built in 1846 to the designs of Charles Hansom or W.W. Wardell. The builder was a local man, George Taylor, so the reason for William's visit is unclear. Myers worked for both Hansom and Wardell, and the parish priest was Dr Rock, D.D. who had been chaplain to the Earl of Shrewsbury, so there were Pugin/Myers connections. Apart from this no clues have been discovered.
- Thomas Earp, the sculptor (1828-93), one year William's senior and also apprenticed to George Myers.
- 3. St Edmond's College, Old Hall Green, Ware, Hertfordshire. Bishop Thomas Griffiths, who had been president of the College 1818-1833, had died recently. Myers (William?) carved his effigy which was designed by Pugin (Westminster Diocesan Archives. 21/4).
- 4. It is not known what William was doing in Oxford.
- 5. Pawn Shop.

January

- Cigar spelt 'Segar' by William. The O.E.D. gives this as an alternative spelling as well as 'seegar', 'cegar' and 'cigarre'.
- This was the terminus of the London & Birmingham Railway, opened in 1837, and now called Euston Station.

February

8. Myers was building the Church of St. Thomas of Canterbury, Rylston Road, Fulham (1847-48: architect A.W.N. Pugin).

March

 Myers was enlarging St Oswald's Church, Winwick, near Warrington, Lancashire 1847-48 to the design of A.W.N. Pugin. The very beautiful furniture and panelling was made in his workshops.

April

- 10. John James was the foreman. He had worked for Myers for years, but in 1854, while working at Beverley, he was arrested and charged with felony. He was convicted of selling stone and sand intended for the restoration of St Mary's Church, to the local carter, George Gawan who was also brought to trial but acquitted. James was jailed for three months, without hard labour. (See Patricia Spencer-Silver, Pugin's Builder, the Life and Work of George Myers, 1993).
- 11. Earl was the Clerk of Works employed during the building of St Mary's, Derby, 1837-1838 (see W.J. Lilley, St Mary's 150 Years Anniversary Booklet, 1989).

- 12. Myers was involved in the building of many churches in Liverpool in the 1840s.
- 13. Cotton Hall, a Georgian House, bought by Lord Shrewsbury, and given to Fr. Faber for his community in 1848. St. Wilfrid's Chapel and other alterations were designed by Pugin, but it is not known that Myers was involved (Ref. A.W.N. Pugin and the Pugin Family, V & A, 1985).
- 14. This is the second of William's unexplained visits to Newcastle, perhaps to carry out work at St Mary's Catholic Church built by Myers 1842-44.
- 15. St Giles Church, Cheadle, Staffordshire, known as "Pugin's Gem" was paid for by the Earl of Shrewsbury, with no expense spared. Most of the work was done by his estate workers, but Myers and Pugin's other craftsmen were called upon to carry out the skilled work. William's visit to Cheadle was on a Sunday, so perhaps this was just a sightseeing visit.
- 16. It is not known what William was doing at any of the places mentioned on this page, except for York where he was visiting his family.

May

- 17. St Saviour's Church, Tetbury, Glos. was a Chapel of Ease, consecrated on 23 August 1848. The architect was S.W. Daukes, Francis Bacon of Tetbury was the builder. Pugin and Hardman were consulted, so perhaps Myers was also. William spent a fortnight in Tetbury working for the Reverend J. Frampton. (See "Remarks").
- 18. Possibly Dr Daniel Rock. See note 1.
- 19. The Builder as one of the most influential illustrated journals of the 19th century, read by all those who had any connection with the construction industry. It was edited for many years by the architect, George Godwin.

June

- 20. Font is a river in Northumberland, but it is not known what work William did here: it could have been in connection with a bridge or weir.
- 21. It is not known who Lewis was or what happened to the carpet bag.

August

- 22. Pugin designed the Church of St Osmund, Salisbury. The foundation stone was laid in April 1847. Sir John Lambert, at one time mayor of Salisbury, and a friend of Pugin's, was a major donor. Myers was not the contractor, but William spent two weeks in Salisbury and appears to have been tipped 2/6d by Mr, later Sir, John Lambert.
- 23. Presumably a tip for the Verger at Salisbury Cathedral.
- 24. The strikes were often to gain a 9 hour working day. There were no strike funds, hence the masons' collections. One hopes that Myers did not discover what was going on. Since 1825 Trade Unions had been tolerated, but their activities were severely restricted. Legal recognition and the 9 hour day were not granted to the Unions until the 1870s.

October

25. In May 1847, Myers wrote to the Reverend James Hornby, whose church he was enlarging at Winwick, to say that he had just returned from the Isle of Wight where he was carrying out a little work. The Catholic Church of St Mary, Ryde, by Joseph Hansom was built at about this time. It is very unlikely that Myers was the builder but it is possible that Myers, in the person of William, did some of the carving. Myers worked for both the Hansoms at different times.

November

- 26. Between 1847 and 1850 Myers was building the Church of St Thomas of Canterbury and the Convent of the Good Shepherd in Fulham. The architect for both was Pugin.
- 27. It is not known what William was doing in Brompton.

December

- 28. The Duke of Portland was developing the area north of Regent's Park, but once again it is not known that George Myers was involved.
- 29. From 1848-49 Myers was building the Church of St John and the parsonage at Penge to the designs of Edwin Nash.

Page following January-

- Johnson & Simpsons, 10 Little Britain, Aldersgate. Gold & Silver lacemen, manufacturers of Military & Naval accountements, gold & silver Indian skein, thread trimmings & spangles, embroideries, refiners, wire drawers, importers of German wire etc. (Kelly's P.O. Directory 1847). Perhaps this was a commission for William's father who, as well as being a Goldsmith, ran a "Fancy Workshop".
- 2. Enquiries have been made of the Salisbury Cathedral Archivist, who suggested that this was a private commission for the Dean as no record of William's work could be found.

February

- 3. In George Myers' book of Pugin working drawings, (owned by the Myers' Family Trust), there are illustrations of a chancel and seats labelled 'Wilburton', dated 1846 and 1848. The Victoria County History of Cambridgeshire Vol.IV p168, states that Wilburton Manor was rebuilt in 1851 to the designs of Pugin, but no primary evidence for this statement has been traced. According to Kelly's Directory of Cambridgeshire, St Peter's Church in the village was also restored in 1851.
- 4. Bag used for carrying food etc. on a journey.
- 5. William was again in Buckland from February 28 to April 6 1849. The Catholic Church of St George had been built in 1846, architect either Charles Hansom or W.W. Wardell. Myers was known to both these men. The builder was a local man, George Taylor. The parish priest, Dr Daniel Rock, was also chaplain to Sir Robert Throgmorton of Buckland.

- Whatever William was doing, the authorities were in a hurry to get it done he worked 10 hours overtime on Good Friday and earned an extra five shillings! (See April 1849).
- 6. Ely was the nearest station to Wilburton.
- Perhaps a sight-seeing visit on his way back to London as he bought a Guide to Cambridge.

April

- 8. It is not possible to guess whether he had pawned his instruments or had been given 3/to buy new ones.
- 9. Probably another sightseeing trip.

May

10. Possibly a beaverskin hat. William made on the transaction. His mother had given him 10/-, the hat only cost 9/-.

June

- 11. St Edmond's College, (Old Hall) Ware, Herts. At a later date, Myers' three younger sons were educated at this school.
- 12. Bishop Griffiths, President of St Edmond's College 1818-1833, had died in 1847. Pugin had designed his tomb and chantry at Old Hall. George Myers was responsible for the carving, (ref. Westminster Diocesan Archives 21/4); William must have been involved.

From now on William's writing is very untidy and difficult to decipher.

July

- 13. Swales was the local pawnbroker.
- 14. David Myers was the eldest of George Myers' five sons.
- 15. The Graps Tavern was a Music Hall in Southwark Bridge Road (see Diana Howard, London Theatres and Music Halls 1850-1950).

October

- 16. William had only one more month to go before his 'Time' was up and being short of cash, sold his instruments (tools) to Tom Earp so that he could make the most of his remaining few weeks in London. But -
- 17. a week later he had gambled away over half what he had borrowed.
- 18. Myers was building St Barnabas' Church, Guildford Road, Stockwell (architects: Isaac Clarke & J. Humphrys), but if William's expenses were in connection with his work at this church, it is difficult to imagine how they were incurred. The site is not far from Ordnance Wharf where he was based.

November

William's 'Time' came to an end on his twentieth birthday, the 16 November 1849. He seems to have been desperate for cash, as he borrowed not only from Swales, the pawnbroker, but from Tom Earp, (the trainee sculptor), and 'Redfern', a name not mentioned before, on the strength of various articles of clothing. But before returning home to York he managed to redeem his boots and other garments. He travelled to Woolwich, had a drink or two and smoked a cigar, and he balanced his accounts.

Note: William's accounting was of course done in £.s.d. to have some idea of the value of his money in modern terms, it is necessary to multiply the sums concerned by 60.

Part 1 of the transcript, covering the years 1845-47 was published in Construction History, Volume 13.
